WELCOME TO WKND

JOVAN ALFORD, SPORTS EDITOR

After defeating both the New York Giants and the Washington professional football club, the Philadelphia Eagles are back in the hunt for the NFC East crown. With a record of 6-6 and 3-1 in the division, the Eagles will be taking on the NFC East-leading Dallas Cowboys (7-5) on Sunday afternoon (4:25 p.m. ET, FOX) at Jerry World. The last time these two teams played each other, the Cowboys came away with a 27-20 victory at Lincoln Financial Field. The defending Super Bowl champions will be looking to return the favor, and in the process try to snap the Cowboys' four-game winning streak.

The historic rivalry lives on

The Army-Navy game is this Saturday. MOLLY GIVEN

The historic and time-honored tradition of the Army-Navy game is playing at Lincoln Financial Field this year for its 119th anniversary, and the epic rivalry between the two powerhouse teams is more intense than ever.

Philadelphia has held the honor of hosting the beloved game before, the City of Brotherly Love's location between West Point and Annapolis makes it the perfect spot. In fact, Philly is already set to remain the game's home for three of the next four years, through 2022.

According to CBS, last year's Army-Navy game broadcast was the rivalry's highest-rated since 1994.

This year college football's longest-running and most-celebrated pregame show "ESPN College GameDay" will be in the city to cover the game, marking the show's fifth appearance at the game.

"As always, we are honored to welcome the Army-Navy game along with its fans, students, alumni and service members back home to Philadelphia," said Larry Needle, executive director of PHLSports in a release. "As a city famous for its love of sports and history, the importance and value of Army-Navy resonates with our community, and we look forward to welcoming the game back for many years to come."

The 48 hours before kick-off is just as spirited as game day itself. On Dec. 7 The official Army-Navy Pep Rally will take place at The Shops at Liberty Place at noon. Guests can join in on this spirited event with Army and Navy cheerleaders, mascots and fans.

Dec. 7 also marks the start of the Patriot Games, a two-day, five-event competition between teams of Cadets and the Midshipmen all around Philadelphia. The Patriot Games consists of The Rocky Relay (Dec. 7, 8:30 am, Philadelphia Museum of Art), the Leadership Reaction Course (Dec. 7, 10 am, Independence Visitor Center), the Pull-Up Challenge (Dec. 7, noon, The Shops at Liberty Place), Tug-of-War (Dec. 7, 3 p.m., USS New Jersey Battleship), and the Stadium Obstacle Relay (Dec. 8, 1:15 p.m., Lincoln Financial Field.)

The day before the game there will also be a special Army-Navy mural unveiling (2 p.m., Lincoln Financial Field, Lot K), an Army-Navy Debate Team competition (4 p.m., Pennsylvania Convention Center, room 203AB) and an Army-Navy Gala (7 p.m.-9 p.m., Pennsylvania Convention Center.) The Gala is a ticketed event attended by more than 1,200 guests including both Academies' superintendents, athletic directors, and additional VIPs. The event also features a Battle of the Bands.

On game day, fans can enjoy Army-Navy FanFest in Headhouse Plaza (gates open at 11 a.m.), followed by the highly anticipated March-On, as the Brigade of Midshipmen and Corps of Cadets enter Lincoln Financial Field at noon in a time-honored procession.

Trying to find a live broadcast of the game? Viewers and listeners can tune into CBS, the official game partner, Westwood One via CBS Sports Radio/WIP 94.1FM and ESPN College GameDay, broadcasting live from Xfinity Live! located adjacent to Lincoln Financial Field.

Meet 'Mrs. Maisel'

"The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel" star is "relieved" that comics don't hate the show. NICOLE RIVELLI / AMAZON STUDIOS

Rachel Brosnahan talks season 2 of the hit Amazon series.

"The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel" is all about the trials and tribulations of Miriam "Midge" Maisel (Rachel Brosnahan), a wife abandoned by her adulterous husband, Joel (Michael Zegen), who decides to radically transform her personal and professional life.

And through it all, the series manages to remain one of the fastest shows on television. It's almost as if co-creators Amy Sherman-Palladino and Dan Palladino purposefully wanted to keep their performers on their toes, but Brosnahan doesn't mind.

"Our prep time was often short between shooting episodes," she tells Metro, "so learning that volume of dialogue as quickly as was necessary was definitely the biggest ongoing challenge for us."

"Things didn't feel like they slowed down to us," she adds. "Midge is still her same fast talkin,' fast walkin' self. She's spinning so many plates at once while trying to keep her comedic alter ego a secret from her family." As a result, she notes, filming for season two actually "felt faster than ever from the inside."

Television shows about stand-up comedians are a dime a dozen. This is as true for "Peak TV" as it was for the advent of the modern sitcom. Yet the details in "The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel" are remarkable. Lenny Bruce (Luke Kirby) recurs throughout both seasons, as does the Phyllis Diller-esque Sophie Lennon (Jane Lynch). Even the black evening gown, matching gloves and pearls Midge wears in her final performance of season one is reminiscent of Joan Rivers.

All of this, and more, helps the program stand apart, and Brosnahan couldn't be more relieved for it.

"I'm so relieved that most of them don't hate us," she says. "It's been encouraging to hear from quite a few comedians that, despite usually hating depictions of stand-up in film and on television, Midge's journey resonates with them."

She concludes "the process of honing material, vying for prime slots and even losing a grip on one's societal filters apparently seems familiar to them."

"The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel" season two is now on Amazon Prime. ANDREW HUSBAND

I'M GOING TO STAND UP IF I WANT TO!
First off, this is the second time I've read someone call people who stand up at concerts, idiots. People seem to be very quick to call people out by their names online while hiding behind a keyboard, acting like they are that concerned about the subject versus just wanting to be seen or heard.

That said, if someone is standing at an opera or while watching a chamber quartet, then yes, it's an issue. But if I go to a concert and the music is designed to make people dance, then guess what: I'm standing!!! I think it is a shame that this is even a legit Grumble. It's like expecting someone to stay seated after their team gets a touchdown.

LOUD MUSIC IN DEPARTMENT STORES!
My pet peeve is those department stores that blast their background music. If I wanted disco music, I'd go to a disco! All the loudness of the music does is get me to leave the store, not shop more!

‘Fair Workweek’ bill approved by City Council

A new law mandating more stable schedules for 130,000 workers in Philly’s service industries gets the green light.

SAM NEWHOUSE

GETTY IMAGES

With support from 60 social, community and labor organizations, Philadelphia City Council passed “Fair Workweek” legislation on Thursday. Hundreds of impacted workers and the Royals Band Dance Line, a University of the Arts dance group and drum line, attended an hours-long City Council hearing to celebrate the passage of the bill.

“We can talk about poverty, or we can do something about it. We choose to do something,” said City Council Member Helen Gym. “This bill is a collaborative effort that advances a historic piece of anti-poverty legislation. It’s one of the most important municipal policies to end exploitative business practices like unstable schedules and involuntary part-time work that keep people in poverty.”

Gym introduced the bill in June 2018 with eight co-sponsors to protect an estimated 130,000 workers who occupy positions in the retail, hospitality and food industries in Philadelphia and often struggle with shifting, unreliable schedules.

Mayor Kenney has endorsed the legislation, which, once signed, will go into effect in 2020 and apply to companies in the retail, hospitality and food services industries that have 250 or more employees and 30 or more locations worldwide, and would apply to full- and part-time employees. Employers will be required to provide detailed schedules 10 days in advance beginning in 2020, and 14 days in advance by 2021.

Adherents of the bill have argued that stronger schedules also benefit their employers by helping employees perform better and stay with companies longer due to greater work-life stability. But some business advocates questioned the wisdom of the bill.

“Neighborhood and Center City businesses negotiated with City Council in an effort to produce an outcome that is acceptable to all parties,” said Chamber of Commerce for Greater Philadelphia President Rob Wonderling. “While some amendments helped ease the regulatory burden on some employers, we are hopeful that the regulatory process will provide further relief to owners of hotels and franchise establishments.”

The Chamber said their concerns include that the bill may reduce available hours and shifts for workers in these industries, or even make it more costly or difficult to run a business in Philadelphia.

The bill includes language requiring employers to pay one hour of “Predictability Pay” (half a regular hour’s wage) for every hour the employee loses when a shift is shortened or canceled; or a single hour if the employee’s shift is changed or extended with no loss of hours (barring schedule changes caused by unexpected issues like severe weather, public safety hazards, or the employee arriving late).

The bill passed 14-3, with Councilmen Al Taubenberger, David Oh and Brian O’Neill voting against.

“Although I strongly support workers’ rights and believe this legislation is well-intentioned, I share the primary concern of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce that the bill, if passed, could restrict and discourage economic growth for the businesses that will be most impacted,” Taubenberger said via email. “As the former head of the Northeast Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce and a pro-business legislator, I have real qualms about the potential for negative, unintended consequences if the ‘Fair Workweek’ bill becomes law.”

With the bill’s approval, Philadelphia follows the example of New York City, Seattle, San Francisco, Washington, D.C. and the state of Oregon, all of which have been lobbied by the “Fair Workweek Initiative,” a program of the nonprofit Center for Popular Democracy, which has been funded by several groups including the Ford Foundation and George Soros’ Open Society Foundation.

Eagles vs. Cowboys: What to watch for

The winner of this game will be in the driver's seat to win the NFC East.

JOVAN ALFORD
jovan.alford@metro.us

The Philadelphia Eagles (6-6) are looking to keep their playoff hopes alive on Sunday afternoon when they take on the Dallas Cowboys (7-5) at Jerry World (4:25 p.m., FOX). For both teams, this is a huge game as whoever wins will more than likely be in the driver's seat for the NFC East crown.

The last time we saw the Eagles on the road, the New Orleans Saints smacked them, 48-7. However, since that humiliating defeat, Philadelphia has beaten both the Giants and Washington in consecutive weeks to put them one game behind Dallas in the division standings.

The Cowboys are hot as well as they are riding a four-game winning streak with their last loss coming on Nov. 5 against the Tennessee Titans. Over the course of their latest winning streak, Dallas is outscoring their opponents, 93-72.

Can the Cowboys rise to the occasion and wrap up the division in a must-win game? Or will the Eagles help them choke down the stretch with only three games remaining in the regular season?

To answer those questions and more, here are three things to watch for in this pivotal NFC East contest.

1. EAGLES' RUN DEFENSE SHOWING SIGNS OF IMPROVEMENT

If the defending Super Bowl champs want to have a chance at winning on Sunday, they have to stop outstanding Cowboys running back Zeke Elliott. In last month's prime-time contest at Lincoln Financial Field, Elliott racked up 187 total yards and two touchdowns.

It was clear that Eagles defensive coordinator Jim Schwartz did not have an answer for Elliott, who was hurdling over defenders and made their eight-man front look like Swiss cheese. However, if there is some good news, it is that Philly's run defense has drastically improved over the last couple weeks.

After getting gashed by Saquon Barkley back in Week 12 to the tune of 97 rushing yards in the first half, the Eagles' defense tightened up and held him to only seven rushing yards in the second half.

This same exact scenario happened earlier this week against Washington. Philly's defense did not do a great job of tackling and allowed Adrian Peterson to rip off a 90-yard rushing touchdown in the second quarter.

However, Peterson finished the game with only 98 yards on the ground. The Eagles' run defense has to keep Elliott under 100 yards or close to it on Sunday.

2. WINNING THE TURNOVER BATTLE

It is not a coincidence that in their last two wins, the Eagles have won the turnover battle. Against the Giants, they intercepted quarterback Eli Manning in the second quarter to spur their comeback; then, against Washington, they intercepted quarterback Mark Sanchez in the fourth quarter to secure the victory.

Therefore, the game plan is quite simple for the Eagles' defense: Pressure Cowboys quarterback Dak Prescott and force him to throw the ball earlier than he wants to. But that is easier said than done, especially this season.

During their four-game winning streak, Prescott has done a good job of taking care of the football with four touchdown passes and zero interceptions. The third-year quarterback's last interception came against the Titans, a game in which the Cowboys lost, 28-14.

3. WHO STEPS UP FOR THE EAGLES?

Over the last two weeks, we've seen the likes of Golden Tate and Josh Adams step up with breakout performances to help lift the Eagles to victory. Who will be that guy this week for the defending Super Bowl champs? It is tough to say, but it could be Alshon Jeffery.

Philly's top wide receiver has not scored a touchdown since Week 7 against the Carolina Panthers, which was also the last time he had more than five catches in a game (seven receptions for 88 yards).

We already know that the Cowboys' defense will be paying heavy attention to star tight end Zach Ertz and making sure they limit his targets. This means that Jeffery should have some one-on-one opportunities on the outside against Dallas' cornerbacks.

Jeffery had four receptions on seven targets for 67 yards and a touchdown in last season's win at Dallas.

NFL Week 14: Take Bills

JETS AT BILLS (-3.5)

Moneyline: Jets +150, Bills -180
Betting Total: 38.5 points

The Jets were shot down by a Matt Barkley-led Buffalo team, 41-10, on Nov. 11, part of a six-game losing streak New York is mired in.

Though Sam Darnold is expected to return after a three-game absence, Josh Allen and the Bills should prevail at home. Allen has averaged 117 rushing yards over his last two starts, making up for his continued wildness through the air. He won't have Kelvin Benjamin (released) to throw to in this one, but rookie Robert Foster and sophomore Zay Jones are emerging as intriguing perimeter talent. LeSean McCoy rushed for 113 yards when these teams met last month. Per Oddsshark.com, teams that have lost six consecutive games are 2-11 straight up and 3-10 ATS in their next game, dating back to 2016. That spells trouble for the fading Jets.

Bills quarterback Josh Allen. REUTERS

The pick: Bills -3.5

GIANTS (-3.5) AT REDSKINS

Moneyline: Giants -190, Redskins +160
Betting Total: 41 points

File it under "too little, too late," but the Giants have won three of their last four games and covered in their only defeat (25-22 to Philadelphia two weeks ago). They could boost their record to 5-8 against a Washington club that has lost four of its last five contests. Third-stringer Mark Sanchez is now under center for the Redskins, and he showed why he's been bouncing around from team to team over the last few years on Monday night with a wholly uninspiring performance. Washington managed all of 235 yards against a beleaguered Eagles defense. Even without ironman Landon Collins, the Giants should be able to keep a one-dimensional Redskins offense in check. The Giants have relied less on Eli Manning during this winning run and more on Saquon Barkley, and it's paid off dividends. Expect Barkley to lead the way to another victory.

The pick: Giants -3.5

FANTASY FOOTBALL ADVICE FOR WEEK 14

OPINION

BILL DUBIEL

Jackson is the back to own in L.A.

With Melvin Gordon nursing an MCL sprain, it's been seventh-round pick Justin Jackson and NOT Austin Ekeler who has emerged as Los Angeles' best replacement back.

Jackson has showed out in back-to-back weeks now with Gordon ailing, posting 57 yards on just seven carries in Week 12 and then 63 yards on just eight carries in Week 13. Ekeler, on the other hand, has underwhelmed on the ground, although he has been more active in the passing game.

While it's undecided yet if Melvin Gordon will play in Week 14, even if he suits up it's unlikely he's given anywhere near a full workload, and it'll be Justin Jackson who benefits. In a game against the lackluster Cincinnati Bengals defense, expect the Chargers to lean heavily on the running game and provide enough opportunities for Jackson to return flex value with touchdown upside.

Justin Jackson (No. 32) of the Los Angeles Chargers. GETTY IMAGES

NFL Sleepers of the Week

Jaylen Samuels, RB, Pittsburgh Steelers – With James Conner confirmed out, Samuels figures to lead the Pittsburgh backfield's committee at running back in Week 14.

Kenneth Dixon, RB, Baltimore Ravens – Alex Collins is on IR and the Ravens' new run-heavy scheme that features Lamar Jackson at QB should allow Dixon sufficient touches for flex value.

Dante Pettis, WR, San Francisco 49ers – With Pierre Garcon and Marquise Goodwin out, Dante Pettis has feasted with three touchdowns in the last two weeks. That success could continue against a mediocre Broncos secondary.
